50¹⁰. The candidate's mandate in the Faculty Student Council and the Student Parliament enters into force from the Electoral Committee's approval of the protocol if the Faculty Student Council member is approved at the Student Parliament's meeting. 23. If the ballot is void, it is not taken into account. A ballot can be void if it contains information that is not necessary for participating in voting (e.g. commentaries, calls for something etc.)

24. If the ballot is voided before the collection of ballots, the representative has the right to receive a new, valid ballot from the Electoral Committee upon returning the voided ballot.

25. The ballots are collected by the Electoral Committee by using an elections' box or another object where it is possible to place the ballots in. The object containing the ballots can not be left unsupervised by the Electoral Committee.

VI. Counting the votes

26. The amount of ballots is identified before starting the vote count.

27. If during the vote count, it becomes apparent that there are more votes than there are persons with the right to vote in the room, a repeat election has to be organised.

28. The vote count takes place in the meeting room. The Electoral Committee can count the votes publicly or in secret. At a public count, the contents of each ballot are read aloud to the representative body. At a secret count, the Electoral Committee counts the votes and publishes the vote's results to the representative body.

29. The results of votes are immediately entered into the protocol by the Electoral Committee.

30. The protocol has to contain:

30.1. The date of the elections;

30.2. The protocol's number, if there are multiple elections during the same meeting;

30.3 The number of ballots handed out;

30.4. The number of ballots collected;

30.5. The number of void ballots;

30.6. The election's results;

30.7. The names and signatures of the Electoral Committee's members.

31. The electoral protocol is read aloud to the representative body and is approved at the same meeting. The electoral protocol is approved by a majority vote by the persons present at the representative body's meeting.

32. If no candidate is elected according to the election results, a repeat vote is organised.

VII. A repeat vote

33. A candidate is considered to be elected if they have received a majority vote from the council's composition unless the Student Body Statutes and the General Electoral Rules state otherwise. A candidate who has not received at least one vote in favour can not become elected.

34. If in the case of more than two candidates, no candidate receives the council composition's majority vote, a second round of voting is organised, where the two candidates with the most votes will participate.

If multiple candidates have an equal amount of votes and their votes are the largest compared to the other candidates, the second round of voting is organised with their participation.

35. If in the case of two candidates, neither candidate receives the council composition's majority vote, a second round of voting is organised, where only the candidate with the most votes will participate. If the candidate can't receive the council composition's majority vote in the last voting round either, new elections are organised.

36. Before the second round of voting, all candidates have the opportunity for a maximum 2-minute speech.

VIII. Challenging the election results

37. The election results can be challenged by a candidate, a member of the representative body or a person who was present at the meeting during the elections and was registered in the meeting's protocol as a guest.

38. The election results can be challenged during 5 workdays after the representative body's meeting took place if the challenger finds that the procedural rules were violated.

39. The disputes will be reviewed and solved by the student body's Monitoring Committee. The Monitoring Committee can dismiss the complaint if they find that the procedural rules were not violated or that the violation of the procedural rules did not affect any candidate's chances of getting elected. Upon satisfying the complaint, the Monitoring Committee will submit a draft decision to the respective representative body to annul the election's results. The representative body can either approve or reject the Monitoring Committee's draft decision. The representative body can make its decision on satisfying the complaint by voting electronically.

40. The ballots have to be preserved at least until all disputes are resolved, and it is not possible to submit new disputes due to expiry.
